Welcome

This year's Boston Foundation annual report tells some profoundly personal stories about how our donors and our nonprofit partners have the capacity to change lives.

Some of the organizations featured in this annual report were supported by a grant from our endowment, the Fund for Boston's Future.

Others were supported by our generous donors or one of our special initiatives. All of them inspire the Foundation's civic leadership, which reflects a unified vision and an unwavering focus on moving equity forward.

Introduction

From Our President and CEO

At the Boston Foundation, we believe that closing the gaps of our region's greatest disparities opens pathways to opportunity, prosperity and equity. We organize our work—our civic leadership, including our convenings, research and public policy campaigns—as well as our grantmaking around four pathways:

- Nurturing Strong Beginnings
- Building Economic Opportunity
- Advancing Community Wealth
- Amplifying Community Leadership

These pathways were developed through a deep collaboration between members of our staff and Board of Directors—and informed by the wisdom of those in the communities we serve.

This annual report is organized around our four pathways to equity. We offer deep thanks to our nonprofit partners who collaborated with us on this report and especially to those who shared their personal and inspiring stories with us.

M. Lee Pelton
President and CEO

THE FOLLOWING STORIES ARE EMBLEMATIC OF OUR FOUR PATHWAYS—AND OF THE WAYS IN WHICH THEY ALL ARE INTERCONNECTED.

A woman who is a chef is going to community college to learn business and open her own food truck. A man who grew up in affordable housing in Fields Corner now leads a nonprofit that meets the complex needs of the people there. A young Latino man is attracted to a nonprofit in Jamaica Plain because it offers music lessons—then finds himself leading a grassroots organizing campaign. We hope you find these stories as moving and inspiring as we do.

Nurturing Strong Beginnings

To build stronger and more equitable systems, the Boston Foundation focuses on all of the people and systems that contribute to a healthy childhood, from addressing racial disparities in health care and social supports for mothers and birthing people, to advancing high-quality education, to providing more and earlier mental and behavioral health care.

The Boston Foundation has a longstanding and deep commitment to excellence in equitable child care and early education. Last year, we informed and advocated for landmark legislation that increased funds for high-quality, affordable early education. In the behavioral and mental health realm, we have offered major support to the HealthySteps program at MGH Chelsea over the last five years.

are pediatricians at at MGH Chelsea Health Center—and on the front lines when it comes to health equity, working with young families whose lives are dominated by stress. “Most of the families we work with are immigrants who speak Spanish, including many who are undocumented,” explains Lambert, who leads the bilingual pediatric practice at the Center.

“And so, they struggle with the uncertainty that brings. On top of that, they have economic stress and crazy work schedules, unreliable access to affordable child care and often precarious housing situations. And they need a lot of help and reassurance to navigate their way through all of it.”

At MGH Chelsea, that help comes from the HealthySteps program, which supports its 12 pediatricians and their staff. “The tremendous support we have from HeathySteps is absolutely invaluable,” says Arauz Boudreau. “I always worry when a mother and baby leave my exam room because I know what overwhelming pressures they face in their lives. With HealthySteps, we have a specialist who keeps track of them and helps them in between visits. It’s incredibly reassuring to our patients and to me as their pediatrician.”

Through the program, a child development professional known as a HealthySteps Specialist connects with and guides families during and between well-child visits as an integral part of the primary care team. HealthySteps places the focus on the social, emotional and cognitive skills that are crucial to healthy development.

Arauz Boudreau adds, “I don’t know of a single family struggling with the harsh effects of poverty that hasn’t gained confidence and benefited from the kind of help HealthySteps provides.”

provides early childhood development support to families where they are most likely to access it—the pediatric primary care office. TBF has supported HealthySteps at MGH Chelsea since 2019—and in 2022 made a two-year grant that will support the program through 2024. For more on HealthySteps, go to healthysteps.org.

Djamila Neves de Deus has worked in almost every store and restaurant in Chelsea, from Home Goods to Market Basket to Dunkin', to support herself and her young daughter Aaliyah, now five years old. Djamila came to Chelsea from Cape Verde on her 16th birthday in 2015 with her sister and brother to join their father who was already living here. She graduated from Chelsea High School and, as an 18-year-old had to grow up very quickly. "When I graduated, I was already pregnant," she explains. Still, while learning how to be a mother and working, she also enrolled in Bunker Hill Community College, determined to further her education.

Since 2020, she has been a teacher at the early education program offered by Community Action Programs Inter-City, Inc. (CAPIC), the first truly meaningful job she's ever had. Of course, she has continued her education, recently receiving a bachelor's in Early Childhood Education from Lesley University and is planning to go on for her master's degree.

"I love being a mother and a teacher at the same time. When you're passionate about something, it doesn't even feel like work and it's fascinating to teach kids who come from the same city my own child is growing up in. It's been a struggle to find affordable housing and make enough money to support myself and Aaliyah, so I understand what the parents and the children I teach are going through."

delivers crucial services to residents of Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop and has since it was founded in 1967. During the pandemic, CAPIC received major support from TBF's COVID-19 Response Fund and from a special partnership of TBF donors and Chelsea nonprofits. CAPIC also receives regular funding from a TBF Donor Advised Fund called the Chelsea Community Fund.

Fanny Li immigrated with her family to the United States 10 years ago from Taishan, a city in the Guangdong Province of southern China. Because she isn't fluent in English, it was important to her that her daughters, Angela and Emily, grow up speaking both Chinese and English. "My goal was to find a place that offered child care in both languages," explains Fanny. To her delight, not only is the child care at Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Center (BCNC) multilingual, but the teacher is also from Guangdong province and speaks Toisanese, the same dialect that she speaks. "Because I can talk with the teacher, I know my daughters are in good hands."

The teacher, Zhuyi Guan, also speaks Cantonese and Mandarin. "Sometimes parents are worried or have questions—and most of them don't speak English. But I can talk with them in their own language and be a bridge between them and their children's education. Next to the smiles on the children's faces when they learn something new, that is my favorite part of this work."

With three locations in Boston and Quincy, BCNC empowers Asians and immigrants to build healthy families and contribute to thriving communities through a range of programs for more than 13,000 children and adults every year. Over the last two years, BCNC has received funding from TBF through a Donor Advised Fund, the Asian Community Fund and the Fund for Boston's Future. For more, go to bcnc.net.

Building Economic Opportunity

To build equitable pathways to success, we focus on strengthening the education-to-career continuum—convening, coordinating and strengthening programs and organizations that engage and educate high school and postsecondary students, and investing in projects and partnerships that expand the model of job training, to helping adults re-enter the workforce.

This year was the 20th anniversary of SkillWorks, TBF's workforce funder collaborative. In the following pages, we bring you stories from two of the nonprofits that SkillWorks has awarded with special Fellowships to implement their approach to solving systemic barriers to economic opportunity and advancement.
On a policy level, TBF spearheaded legislation to close the wage gap in Massachusetts in partnership with Wage Equity Now. The Frances Perkins Workforce Equity Act was passed on October 19th of this year.

“I want to be a woman in STEM who is setting a path for future generations of women to reinforce the fact that we do belong in this field.”

Evely Cruz was born in Peru, but emigrated to Boston with her parents in 2007. As she grew older, she had a hard time finding her place in the world. “I’m driven by goals and by passion and I wasn’t finding either of them,” she says. “As time went by, I was getting older and still had not discovered my path.”

On a trip to Peru, however, she was introduced to the world of engineering. “I loved the challenges and I found that engineering fit my personality.” Returning to Boston, she enrolled in college and joined Hack.Diversity. She is now a software engineer at the same company she was matched with at Hack. About her future, she says, “I want to be a woman in STEM who is setting a path for future generations of women to reinforce the fact that we do belong in this field.”

Hack.Diversity seeks to transform our economy by breaking down barriers for Black and Latino professionals in tech. Last year, TBF's workforce funder collaborative, SkillWorks, awarded the nonprofit the Project Catapult Grant. Go to hackdiversity.com to learn more about the organization.

> "Hack.Diversity heavily influenced my career goals and aspirations."

was labeled a "quiet kid," one of three sons raised by a single working mom in Boston and Salem. "The school culture I grew up in idolized the audacious and outgoing," he explains. And so he focused on his studies and it paid off. In his senior year, he won the Jack Welch Scholarship—a full four-year scholarship to Salem State University. He developed an interest in data analytics and eventually met folks from Hack.Diversity at a virtual career fair.

"Hack.Diversity heavily influenced my career goals and aspirations." During his Fellowship at Hack, Javier was matched to an internship at a company that paid 60 percent more per hour than his first job. Today, he works as an analytics engineer at a cybersecurity startup. "I really wouldn't be where I am today without Hack.Diversity."

grew up in a house with her grandmother and mom listening to music and cooking and seeing everyone gather at the table. "I loved it," says Ebony. "My grandmother made everything from scratch—from the turkey to the greens to the cornbread. I had a little notebook and would sit in a corner and write down what she was making, but she would never measure. When I asked her how much of some ingredient to put in, she would say, 'Until our ancestors tell me to stop!'"

Ebony grew up to become the single mother of four children, today ranging in age from 20 to 14—all of them doing well. But raising them made it hard for her to think about her career. "God dealt me my cards, but didn't give me a life book." For a while, she worked as a second-line cook at TD Garden for Celtics and Bruins events. It was there that a fellow worker saw something in her and said, "You should go to NECAT."

That was the first time she'd heard about the nonprofit NECAT (New England Culinary Arts Training), which empowers adults facing barriers to employment through culinary training, but not the last. It seemed that everyone she met was mentioning NECAT. Ebony finally decided to check it out. In February of this year, she started training there and now, less than a year later, she is the showcase chef at Earl's Kitchen and Bar in the Prudential Center—the first chef people see upon entering.

Ebony is writing her own life book these days. Taking advantage of the state's free tuition for those over 25, she is going to Roxbury Community College to earn a degree in business management. "My passion, my goal at the end of the day is to own a food truck. And now I'm on my way to realizing my dream."

goal is long-term success and financial stability for alumni of their training programs. Last year, the organization received a two-year fellowship and grant from TBF's workforce partnership SkillWorks Funders Collaborative. Go to skill-works.org for more.

NECAT's

14-week training program teaches culinary skills, life skills and career readiness. One thing trainees learn is how to make the five mother sauces: hollandaise, classic tomato, béchamel, Espagnole and velouté. For more on NECAT, go to ne-cat.org.

Filippo Napoli

has had a remarkable year—one of recovery and promise. "Recovery is not a linear process for most. Recovery is messy; individuals take two steps forward and one step back." That's a quote from a newsletter published by Massachusetts Access to Recovery (ATR), a government-sponsored program for those with substance use disorders seeking to change their lives. The article describes the journey that Filippo Napoli has taken to break the hold that alcohol has on his life. After two times enrolling in treatment, he finally made enough progress at ATR that he took their advice and enrolled in NECAT.

"I had been a cook, but at NECAT I discovered that I didn't know as much about the culinary world as I thought I did," he says. "And I love food; I love cooking. I also met some wonderful people there who changed my life."

One of the basics NECAT teaches is that there are five mother sauces. "I think mentioning that helped me get the job I have now." Today, he's a cook at Encore—where he has flourished. When he spoke with us, he was still living in a sober house, but planning to move into his own apartment in Everett.

After less than a year, Filippo applied for and received one of the company's four-year scholarships to UMass Boston. He also plans to take advantage of Encore's program to help with a down payment for a house. "That's my ultimate goal—to own my own home."

Amplifying Community Leadership

The Boston Foundation is working to reknit the social fabric and make our communities whole, by providing movement leaders with beyond-the-grant support to amplify too-often unheard community voices, investing in community-led grantmaking, strengthening the safety net, and empowering nonprofit leaders to center equity and strengthen their organizations.

TBF has a long history of supporting grassroots organizers. Currently, our two-year Boston Neighborhood Fellows program provides funding to local leaders doing important grassroots work. It provides recognition and direct financial support to those who work in community service to the Greater Boston area.

was drawn to Hyde Square Task Force (HSTF) to mix with other young people his age and play music. Now he is a budding community organizer. "HSTF took us on field trips to places like the Massachusetts State House," says Danny, "where we met with some senators and visited the Hall of Flags and Memorial Hall. I had never even been there before."

Danny got involved in the organization's community organizing efforts and ended up leading a youth movement to expose pricing inconsistencies at major grocery chains. "It all started back in January. The youth of HSTF read an article about how low-income neighborhoods pay more for their groceries than high-income neighborhoods."

Danny and other youth decided to compare prices at a major grocery chain in Jamaica Plain's Jackson Square and the town of Dedham and discovered that the inner-city store charged 18 percent more than the suburban store. Their discovery has drawn a lot of attention to the issue and the group plans to continue to organize around fairness in supermarket pricing this year.

In addition to organizing, Danny participated in almost every other aspect of HSTF's offerings over five years. He played the drums with other young musicians, helped to paint a mural in Hyde Square's Mozart Park celebrating Afro-Latino music, and took advantage of Caminos, a college and career pathways program that helped him decide to pursue a college education in computer science.

"I graduated from high school and HSTF this spring, but I don't picture myself ever leaving this community. All of the youth who graduated with me cried at the HSTF graduation. They were definitely happy tears."

Hyde Square Task Force

was behind the designation of Hyde Square as Boston's Latin Quarter. It partners with Success Boston, launched by TBF and other funders to increase college completion rates for Boston Public Schools graduates. For more on HSTF, visit hydesquare.org.

George Huynh grew up in an affordable housing development in Dorchester's Fields Corner called Bloomfield Gardens that the nonprofit organization VietAID helped to build. Now, he is VietAID's Executive Director during a demanding time when the impact of the pandemic is still being felt by the neighborhood's low-income residents.

"The overall level of need is still very high," he explains. "There is a lot of insecurity in housing and food and employment. COVID exacerbated a number of the inequities that already existed in the Vietnamese community and there continue to be lots of folks who are struggling to make ends meet."

VietAID provides a dizzying number of services to a largely Asian population of all ages—from young children to seniors. Its food pantry hands out more than 150 bags of fresh groceries four days a week. It also has a youth program, a community garden, offers counseling—and serves as a community development corporation.

One of VietAID's most dynamic programs focuses on youth leadership. "During COVID, some social skills were lost because there wasn't an opportunity for youth to interact. In addition to surveying other students about the mental health challenges they are facing now, our youth are also involved with our community garden and had a big voice in pushing for that."

VietAID is collaborating with a number of organizations, many under Fields Corner Crossroads Collaborative, to address the need for more usable open spaces in the neighborhood. A major concern is the lack of affordable housing and the pace of development in the area.

He is especially proud of the early education programming. "Our pre-school program is the first bilingual, bicultural pre-school program in the state—and the only one in Vietnamese. It's been with us since 2005, and we're proud to have partnered with the City of Boston and the Boston Public Schools since 2019. All of our teachers are EEC certified and our kids get a lot of attention and a quality education. They also get a lot of love."

Kevin Lam

(he/they) found his way to social movement change work as a result of his family’s history and their experiences of resettlement to the U.S. His family fled Vietnam and Laos during the war in Southeast Asia, and resettled to Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where Kevin was born and raised. The refugee resettlement process and the conditions in which he grew up profoundly shaped the ways he has navigated the world.

“As a queer Southeast Asian young person growing up in Poughkeepsie, I did not see others who looked like me or shared similar experiences,” he explains. “The isolation I felt is where my yearning to find and build with Southeast Asian communities and do movement work began.”

In 2016, he joined the Asian American Resource Workshop (AARW). Today he is Co-Executive Director with Carolyn Chou. “We are a political home for pan-Asian communities in Greater Boston,” says Kevin, “and we focus our organizing work on fighting systemic and structural violence that continues to displace our people from our homes, neighborhoods, communities, loved ones and land.”

For more about AARW, go to www.aarw.org. AARW received a grant from the Asian Community Fund this year. Kevin is also a member of the current cohort of TBF’s Boston Neighborhood Fellows program. For more about Boston Neighborhood Fellows and the Asian Community Fund, go to tbf.org.

Advancing Community Wealth

Through affordable housing preservation, establishing and strengthening pathways to home ownership, helping to build and grow thriving cultural spaces, and fostering opportunities for Asian, Black, Indigenous, and Latino-owned small businesses to thrive, the Boston Foundation is focused on building stable, enriching and equitable communities across the region.

TBF has supported nonprofits that save and build affordable housing since the early 1960s as well as many community-based arts spaces and artists. Through the Business Equity Fund, we also support small businesses owned by people of color. And, in our role as a civic leader, we have published numerous reports on the affordable housing crisis, including the annual Greater Boston Housing Report Card. Go to tbf.org for all of our reports.

Tonya Morris

was used to being told "no" when she asked for something she really needed. But when she went to MAHA (Mass Affordable Housing Alliance), she heard "Yes." They would help her buy a house.

These days, Tonya often wakes up with a smile on her face because she has achieved the goal that had seemed elusive for so many years. She has become a homeowner—the first in her family. "After years and years of renting, I had promised myself and my daughters that someday we would own a home, but to be honest I never thought this day would ever happen," she says. "Now I wake up thankful to be alive and to have good kids, a roof over our heads and food to eat.

"There have been many obstacles and challenges, but the support I received gave me the hope to believe in myself and that buying a home was possible." With its courses in homebuying and other services, MAHA helps people like Tonya make homeownership possible and affordable. Its work is focused on breaking down the multitude of barriers that face first-time and first-generation homebuyers like Tonya—with the ultimate goal of helping to close the racial wealth and homeownership gaps in the state.

Since 1985, MAHA's campaigns have resulted in affordable mortgages for more than 26,000 homebuyers and more than $10 billion in public and private investment in affordable housing.

Tonya wanted to purchase a home in Boston, but found that she was priced out, even from houses that needed a daunting amount of work. She finally found her new home in Randolph. Now, as a homeowner, she is dealing with all the things that can go wrong—the first challenge was a faulty electrical system. "It's hard. It's a challenge, but I wouldn't have it any other way."

was founded in 1985 and received its first large grant from TBF the next year. It has been a close nonprofit partner ever since. Its homebuyer and homeowner education programs have graduated more than 40,000 people. Go to: mahahome.org for more.

The Neighborhood Developers

has more than 40 years of experience tackling the affordable housing challenge from all angles. It creates and preserves safe, healthy housing while ensuring that people can stay in their homes by providing a multitude of services. For more, go to: theneighborhooddevelopers.org.

has a story that brings to life the migrant crisis we are facing in Greater Boston and other parts of the country by illustrating one of the many reasons so many people want to come here.

In 2005, Berta Ramos walked—all by herself—from El Salvador to the United States when she was just 18. She had three brothers already living here and was deeply concerned about the growing gang violence in her country. She got out just in time. By the next year, there would be some 25,000 active gang members in El Salvador and an average of 10 homicides every day.

"I walked by myself, sleeping sometimes in someone's car or in a motel. Other times, I just slept outside on the ground," she says. When she finally made it to Boston, she was given refuge for several months in a shelter run by a church and eventually was able find affordable housing with a Section 8 voucher, the federal government's program for assisting very low-income families. By then, she had also met her husband, Alexis Henriquez, and started a family, but her trials weren't over.

"The apartment we were living in burned down and we lost everything. I was three months pregnant and I had so much fear and stress about finding another place to live."

Enter The Neighborhood Developers (TND), which serves the people of Chelsea, Revere and Everett by building affordable housing for families and providing other services that help families become financially stable.

Today, Berta and Alexis live with their three children in a TND-built housing development called Acadia, located just one block from Chelsea's four elementary schools. "We feel supported and welcome in this community—and I am living the life I was looking for when I came here."

Jinyi Duan and Brian Lim

are founders of The Flavor Continues (TFC), the first community-led nonprofit organization exclusively focused on advocating for, serving and supporting the Street and Club dance communities in Massachusetts. The Flavor Continues team has expanded since its inception through the very method this large and diverse community of dancers has always communicated—by word of mouth and personal connections—with the additions of their Creative Director, Bao Pham, and their Artistic Director, Alex Ambila. As Street and Club dance practitioners themselves, the mission is one that is very close to all of their hearts.

According to Brian, "Before becoming a nonprofit organization, we were already a community. Street and Club dances are art forms that have been around for decades, cultivated by the ingenuity and strife of Black and Brown communities in America." For Jinyi, Brian, and the intergenerational group of dancers they bring together every week, it's about more than artistic expression. Brian explains: "Our mission is to drive social impact through Street and Club dance and create opportunities for fellow creatives to strengthen their connections with each other."

TFC operates out of spaces in Somerville and Cambridge now, but plans to open a physical center to serve as a permanent home for its educational and other programs, while also catering to a community beyond just dance.

EXPANDING AFFORDABLE HOUSING.

REACHING WAGE EQUITY FOR WOMEN AND WORKERS OF COLOR.

IMPROVING MATERNAL AND INFANT HEALTH.

MAKING BOSTON A LEADER IN CLIMATE RESILIENCE.

PROMOTING DEMOCRACY THROUGH CIVIC ENGAGEMENT.

These issues and many others call for structural and systemic shifts only made possible by working together on a local and regional level—and by changing public policy.

By far, the most effective way the Boston Foundation contributes to our unwavering focus on moving equity forward is through our civic leadership. Our work informs public policy through research, catalyzes conversations among those most affected by existing policies and advocates not only for change, but for the repair of the historical harms of inequity.

The people and companies listed in this Annual Report helped to make that work possible this year with their generous support of our Annual Campaign for Civic Leadership. We thank them for their support.

In Support of Greater Boston

The Fund for Boston's Future is Greater Boston's endowment fund and the most flexible held by TBF. These resources give our staff and board the resources they need to address structural inequities. It's made up of hundreds of separate funds that are either for a specific purpose or completely unrestricted.

A MAJOR BEQUEST TO THE FUND FOR BOSTON'S FUTURE

A new member of our Centennial Society, listed on the next page, is a remarkable woman named Willma Davis, who left a bequest of $5 million to the Fund for Boston's Future. Her gift comes with the broad purpose of furthering education and health, arts and culture, neighborhoods and housing and jobs and economic development—all areas that are central to our guiding principle of advancing equity in our city and region.

Davis was a woman of action driven by ideals. Born in Boston, she earned her undergraduate degree from Ohio State University and graduate degrees from Boston University and Northeastern. Education was deeply important to her, reflected in the establishment of the Willma Davis STEM Scholarship for Young Women in partnership with the United Negro College Fund. She was equally engaged in the arts, women's issues and the pursuit of social justice.

In addition to a full and successful career in business—including 26 years at John Hancock Financial Services, Inc. as a Senior Managing Director—Davis served on numerous boards and committees. In 1990, Ebony magazine included her in its list of 100 Best and Brightest Black Women in Corporate America.

When she passed away in 2021, her obituary noted, "Willma was generous with her time and resources. Her character was unwavering and her inspiration will live on." Through her generous legacy gift to TBF's endowment, her legacy will benefit the Greater Boston community for many years to come.

ADVANCING A SHARED VISION FOR GRASSROOTS PHILANTHROPY

The EQUALITY Fund
AT THE BOSTON FOUNDATION

LATINO EQUITY FUND

THE ASIAN COMMUNITY FUND
AT THE BOSTON FOUNDATION

Field of Interest funds are built in partnership with deeply committed community leaders. As such, they are central to our work advancing equity by amplifying the power of grassroots philanthropy to meet the needs of some of our most marginalized communities.

Complementing our leadership in strengthening the Black community—through Embrace Boston and the Racial Wealth Gap Partnership—our Equity Funds work independently and collaboratively to deepen our equity agenda in the LGBTQ+, Latinx, and Asian American and Pacific Islander communities.

Over more than a decade, and thanks to generous support from community-based donors, some $3.4 million in grants have been made to nonprofits meeting the needs of these communities. All three also illustrate and reflect TBF's deep commitment to civic leadership by publishing leading-edge research and bringing stakeholders together to form strategic partnerships for change.

Over the last year, with the guidance of advisory boards made up of dedicated community members, the leaders of our three Equity Funds have come together. The common goal is to develop shared strategies to support emerging and promising grassroots initiatives—as well as nonprofits with long histories of service and changes in public policy that are having powerful impact on these important communities.

THE POWER OF IMPACT INVESTING

Ellen Remmer has been captivated by the power of impact investing for more than 25 years when she first heard about it at a philanthropy conference. It began with a desire to invest her family's philanthropic dollars in alignment with their values. "I dove right into the idea that our investment dollars should support our philanthropic goals—and certainly not undermine them," she says.

Remmer is a Senior Partner at the philanthropic advisory firm The Philanthropic Initiative—and helped to launch Invest for Better, a global, women-focused nonprofit with the motto "Harness the power of money to create a better world."

When TBF offered the Impact Pool as an investment option, Remmer's family fund immediately took advantage of the opportunity to invest their fund in a way that has a positive social impact. And when TBF offered Recoverable Grants, her family's Donor Advised Fund immediately joined with 28 other TBF donors to invest a total of more than $6 million.

In addition to Recoverable Grants, TBF offers donors the opportunity to work closely on custom impact-focused funds, such as the Business Equity Fund, as well as investments in housing, the environment and other important areas of community life.

"I truly believe that people don't recognize the power they have when it comes to investing their dollars and supporting nonprofits in many different ways," says Remmer. "But that's starting to change—and community foundations like TBF can lead the way."

Ellen Remmer and her family chose to focus their Donor Advised Fund's Recoverable Grant on "Equal Opportunity for Families" with a focus on early education.

Professional Advisors

We are proud to work closely with Greater Boston's professional advisors who support their clients in every aspect of their philanthropic giving. We are thankful for the contributions of our Professional Advisor's Committee and our Professional Advisor's Network for collaborating with us and advocating for the importance of philanthropy and high-impact charitable planning.

Becoming a Donor

We know Boston. And that knowledge gives us the unique perspective and calling to bring together ideas, resources and partnerships that can build a city where opportunity meets possibility to achieve equity. We know this work requires deep engagement from philanthropists, thinkers and doers. We invite you to join us.

Give With Us

Collaborate with us to increase the power of our grantmaking and create a more equitable Boston. No one funder can move the needle on our most pressing and intractable problems. We combine our philanthropy with deep public policy work that brings about systemic change. Your participation can strengthen our impact.

Give Through Us

Establish a Donor Advised Fund at the Boston Foundation. This is ideal if you want the benefits of opening or maintaining a private foundation with none of the administrative, legal, tax or regulatory burdens. You can maximize your philanthropy with access to our research, expert asset management, and unparalleled experience with donors and Greater Boston's nonprofit organizations. Your giving can be local, national or international in scope.

Legacy Giving

If you're thinking about the future, we can work with you today to develop a legacy plan for tomorrow that will have the maximum benefit on future generations.

Impact Investing

We offer a number of opportunities for fund advisors to engage in impact investing. And as a foundation with our own impact-first investments and initiatives as well as a market rate Impact Pool we have expertise few other organizations can offer.

Give To Us

Our Annual Campaign for Civic Leadership supports the most effective way TBF contributes to the bold ambition of achieving equity. Our work informs public policy, catalyzes conversations and advocates not only for change, but to repair and heal the historical harms of inequity.

Get Started

For more information about becoming a donor now or planning for your legacy, contact us at 617-338-2213 or donorservices@tbf.org.

Supporting Our Nonprofit Partners

Equity at the Center

To advance equity and close the gaps caused by our region's greatest disparities, we tackle the individual, systems-level and root-level causes of inequity. To do this, our work with our nonprofit partners extends beyond grantmaking, allowing us to work together to tackle these complex and challenging issues most effectively.

Our work is focused on Pathways to Equity—four interconnected areas where we believe the Foundation is best situated to support and partner with community-based organizations and leaders to advance their work.

Our Four Pathways to Equity

Nurturing Strong Beginnings

Building Economic Opportunity

Advancing Community Wealth

Amplifying Community Leadership

Our Safety Net Grants

Our Safety Net Grants program is designed to support social service organizations that respond to essential needs for marginalized communities and vulnerable residents in Greater Boston. These grants provide general operating funds to nonprofits addressing critical, immediate and essential needs.

Our Nonprofit Sector Infrastructure Team

As part of our Amplifying Community Leadership Pathway, our Nonprofit Sector Infrastructure Team offers services to the nonprofit sector, including a bi-monthly newsletter, Nonprofit Update, which connects nonprofit leaders across the Greater Boston region and beyond with RFP and grant opportunities, important upcoming events, and other news and resources to support a thriving nonprofit sector.

For More About Partnering With Us

We encourage you to visit our website at tbf.org and choose "Nonprofits" to explore our four Pathways to Equity in detail. If your organization sees a potential partnership with us, we invite you to reach out to that Pathway's Team to discuss grants and other opportunities. You will also find information about how to apply to our Safety Net Grants program and other resources for nonprofits.

2023 Financials

Fund for the 21st Century

The Boston Foundation offers three separate investment pools within the Fund for the 21st Century. These three pools allow donors to select the option that best matches the time horizon of their charitable giving plans. Donors may also customize their asset allocation by investing among all three pools. The pools include the Balanced Plus Pool, the Impact Pool and the Short Term Pool. The Balanced Plus Pool asset mix is expected to produce the highest long-term investment return. Accordingly, the Boston Foundation invests its endowment assets primarily in the Balanced Plus Pool.

Financial Oversight

The Foundation's Investment Committee establishes investment policy and monitors the individual investment managers and their performance, and the Board sets each year's spending rate. The Investment Committee is assisted by an independent investment consulting firm.

The Balanced Plus Pool assets include global stocks, investments with flexible capital managers, private equity, venture capital, real estate, and treasury securities.Diversification among multiple asset classes should help to reduce the volatility of the Foundation's investment returns.

The Spending Policy

By using a spending policy, the Foundation helps to ensure that the charitable funds will be protected for the future, while continuing to have the most impact today. The 2023 spending policy input rate was 5% for its permanently restricted discretionary funds. For Fiscal Year 2024, the Board approved to continue the spending policy input rate at 5% for its discretionary endowment. The Foundation uses a smoothing mechanism that helps balance the current endowment market value and the previous level of spending. Spending is equal to 70% of spending from the previous year, adjusted for inflation, plus 30% of the spending policy input rate applied to the current market value. The approved spending policy input rate for designated endowment funds remained at 5% for Fiscal Year 2024.

The Philanthropic Initiative

The Philanthropic Initiative (TPI) is a significant business unit of the Foundation. TPI designs, carries out and evaluates philanthropic programs for individual donors, families, foundations and corporations. The experience and reputation of TPI significantly expands the range of philanthropic services the Foundation offers. During Fiscal Year 2023, the operations of TPI added $3.5 million of service fee income to the operations of the Foundation.
